★ Hay production and ponds

Cattle Committee will be held Thursday, October 30th at Pitchford Genetics. The facility is located just north of Athens. From Loop 7 North side of Athens, go North on CR 3720 (at Red Hat Rental) 0.2 miles. Then go West on CR 3718 0.2 miles. Finally, go North on CR 3715 1.3 miles (down through bottoms and up on the hill) to entrance of Pitchford Genetics on your right. Starting at 6:30 p.m. with registration beginning at 6:00, the event will also feature topics including cool season weed control in pastures and hay meadows. Dandelions, thistle, swamp buttercup and other winter and spring weeds have become a real problem for a lot of producers and T.V. Smith, Field Service Representative with DuPont Agricultural Products will address this topic. Dr. Mac Devin, D.V.M. with Fort Dodge Animal Health will discuss Trichomoniasis and its potential effects on beef cattle production in East Texas.

Participants who attend the Roundtable will be awarded one continuing education unit towards the recertification of private, commercial and non-commercial applicators license. The cost for the program is $8.00 per person and will include a barbecue dinner. Please R.S.V.P. to the Henderson County Extension office on or before Tuesday, October 28th. There will be a lot of good information presented at the Roundtable and I hope to see you there.

POND MANAGEMENT:

No two ponds are ever exactly alike. Even ponds in the same watershed and built very close to each other can be very different in appearance, and differences in watershed and soil characteristics are particular to each pond. Differences affecting management are those associated with water quality, plankton and fish populations.

Water quality factors such as temperature, pH, alkalinity, hardness and dissolved oxygen affect fish health and production. These factors are rarely constant in a pond. Temperature, dissolved oxygen and pH will change or cycle each day and alkalinity can change over longer periods of time.

Many of the basic problems of farm pond management have already been discussed. These include how to maintain a good food supply for the fish, how to harvest to maintain a balanced population, how to check balance, how to control weeds and how to avoid fish kills from algae bloom die-offs. These are not simple problems. Ponds are complex systems that take understanding and commitment to manage properly.

One common problem in Texas is pond "turn-over." Turn-overs occur when ponds are stratified; that is, surface water is warmer than the water below and the two layers no longer mix. This causes the cooler water near the bottom to stagnate and become depleted in oxygen. Fish avoid this layer of water. A turn-over occurs when the warm upper layer suddenly cools off and mixes with the stagnant layer. The two layers mixed together may not have enough oxygen to support fish and they die. This usually occurs after a cold, hard rain. If a turn-over occurs, quick aeration may save the fish. Similar fish kills also can be caused by oxygen depletions from a bloom die-off or rotting vegetation from herbicide treatment.

IMPORTANT DATES:

October 30th - Cow-Calf Roundtable, Pitchford Genetics, 6:00 p.m., $8.-- per person, one C.E.U.

November 8 - Henderson County 4-H Chili Bonanza, Henderson County Senior Citizens Building, Athens. Entries accepted until October 31st.

Rick Hirsch is the Henderson County Extension Agent - Agriculture for the Texas AgriLife Extension Service. Visit his web page at <http://henderson-co.tamu.edu>.

OUR HEARTS

As tragedy has stricken this small town,
Once again we hurt
For the young that we love,
For the young that we admire,
For the young that we praise.

Wishing for their happiness,
Wishing for their peace,
Wishing for their everlasting life.

We can only hope that this brings wisdom
To the ones left behind,
The young ones that see,
To the young ones that are about to be,
Please take heed.

Learn from this terrible accident.
No one should have to go through this,
Least of all these great young men;
Least of all, their mother.

Think of this:
It only takes a second for your world,
And everyone's around you to change.
Forever.
Be safe always.

On a personal note ... Aaron and Nick were terrific young men, always very respectful and funny and extremely intelligent and will be greatly missed by all. We love you guys.
